Fly fishing with separate individual parts of an entire fly line (shooting head, running line) is becoming increasingly popular.

The advantage here is that you can select your shooting head perfectly for the respective situation and thus have the greatest possible flexibility! And this is where it comes into play - the first Runningline from STROFT!

This is a monofilament line with a flat, rectangular cross-section, a so-called Flat Mono, without coating. The STROFT Runningline offers best shooting characteristics and perfect handling. Due to the smaller diameter and significantly less friction, it is clearly superior to coated Runninglines in terms of casting distance. In the tuning, special attention was paid to optimal suppleness and a perfectly tuned elongation. In addition, an optimized raw material composition was used to create a running line that is easy to stretch and remains curl-free - even at low temperatures!
